Lanao Sur stalls canvass

No COC yet due to special elections

By Philip C. Solera and Lela B. Salaverria

TWENTY-EIGHT CLAUSTRATED provinces in Lanao del Sur, which held special elections because of security concerns, yesterday delayed the canvassing of votes for president and vice president, further delaying the proclamation of winners.

Only the conditions of canvass (COC) of the province out of a total of 278 COCs has yet to be filled in recently by Congress, acting as the national board of canvassers, for the top two elective posts.

Congress began 12 days ago its canvassing of results of the May 10 presidential and vice presidential elections.

Senate Majority Leader Juan Miguel Zubelli said the board decided that it would postpone the country's new president and vice president race now.

"We will have the proclamation at 2 p.m. on Wednesday for president and vice president," Zubelli said reporters after emerging from a one-and-a-half-hour session.

He said the board would canvass the results from Lanao del Sur at 1 p.m. today.

SINE DIE ADJOURNMENT

Freedom of info bill is dead—Nograles

By Lela B. Salaverria and Christian K. Espasena

THE FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (FOI) bill is dead and nothing can be done in the dying weeks of the Ayen administration in bringing it back to life, Speaker Prospero Nograles made clear yesterday.

Nograles, who said he was just as frustrated as the bill's champions were at the compromise of the measure, thanked those who suggested to lawyer Ramon Macabalan that the bill be stalled in the current joint session of Congress prior to the proclamation of the new president and vice president.

Nograles said the suggestion was not "logically possible" because Congress already decided to adjourn with the bill in its current form.

Neither could President Macabalan's lawyers call a special session just to resurrect the FOI bill, he added.

The reasoning where he (Macabalan) got that theory. Our legislative rules have accepted and even the President can't call us to a special session. Congress adjourned sine die already," Nograles said.

The House of Representatives was supposed to re-open the bill on its last session day last week, but the lack of a quorum killed the measure.

Proponents of the bill insisted that there were already

"NOBODY," THE CATCH phrase used by the Komang gang leader, Warden Criss, was ringing out of the loudspeakers in the detention station at the provincial facility holding the prisoners.

It seemed to be providing the party soundtrack as the Ampatuans, accused of orchestrating what is considered the country's worst political bloodbath in its recent history, welcomed visitors to their cells and treated them to food and beer.

A ranking jail official, however, said yesterday that like other detainees, the Ampatuans still enjoyed "rights," including allowances for holding or celebrating at their own expense within designated areas of the facility.

This was how these visitors of other detainees at Camp

Maximo Delos Angeles in Zamboanga City received what they saw and heard that afternoon in separate interviews with Inquirer staff.

Detained at the five-story facility are Davao City Mayor Isidoro Ampatuan Jr.; his father, Maguindanao Gov. Andal Ampatuan Sr.; his brothers, including

Aquino bits 'presumptuous' groups floating lists

By Gil Colapinto

PREMATURE PRESIDENT AFFAIR? Despite Aquino II's bid for the "pre-presidential" of some groups and individuals, some of them seem to be presumptuous in floating lists of candidates for the next election.

In a press conference at the Times Herald building in Quezon City, Aquino said there were a lot of people floating lists of candidates for the next election.

"These don't believe there's a bid for that is true. It is the way that I will come from. I have said a number of people are expecting for my party and I have heard that others were being considered for that same post, that they were being considered for that same post," said Aquino.

He said that while some groups (Aquino's former political allies) were floating lists, he did not expect anyone to be elected.

Although he declined to name his chosen side, he said he would not be surprised if he was elected. He said he would not be surprised if he was elected.

Survey: More Pinoys see better life ahead

THE NUMBER OF REGISTERED VOTERS WHO ARE optimistic that their lives will improve in the next 12 months has increased, a Social Weather Stations (SWS) survey conducted in March showed.

Three percent of the 3,300 voters interviewed said they were optimistic that their lives will improve in the next 12 months.

The survey was conducted in March 2010. It was the first time since 2007 that more than 10 percent of voters were optimistic that their lives will improve in the next 12 months.

Consumers can expect lower power bills this month—Meralco

By Amy R. Bano

CONTINUED OF POWER DISTRIBUTION Manila Electric Co. (Meralco) says expected lower electricity bills to go down by 15 percent per kilowatt-hour (KWH) this month due to a reduction in transmission and operation charges.

A reduced customer message (MCM) is expected to be around 15 percent per KWH, the company said.

However, with a 300-400 percent increase in the cost of gas, the company said it will be a net loss of around 10 percent.

Israel rejects international probe of deadly raid

TEL AVIV—AP/WIDE WORLD—Israel's cabinet on Monday approved a U.N. Security Council resolution that would force Israel to accept an international investigation into its deadly raid on a Gaza-bound aid ship and said it had the right to launch its own probe.

"We are rejecting an international condemnation. We are distancing with the United Nations resolution a view to the fact that we are not going to accept an international investigation into the Gaza-bound aid ship," said the U.N. Security Council, which is in Washington, said on the UN TV.

Unesco prize financed by infamous dictator

PARIS—A NEW international prize for scientific achievement has been financed by one of Africa's most infamous dictators, but it has been praised by many.

The Unesco-Othman prize, established in 1997, is awarded to scientists from Africa who have made significant contributions to science.

The prize is named after Othman, a former dictator of Chad, who was known for his brutal rule and human rights abuses.

The Goal: A Green Globe

Repealing the government tax system is clearly a potentially winning component of the country's long-neglected economic policy. In the package there is the environment, the government's growth policy, and social issues are working together to put together a complete new road to better living without financial assistance. The country and its citizens will have a new direction for economic growth and social progress.

Charles T. Davis, author, says that the first business plan that he ever saw was created with a marketing objective. This is now, said Davis, the exception of the organic plan with marketing. Charles Davis, founder of Strategic Business Planning, claims to be the first to develop a business plan with a marketing objective. He says that he developed the business plan with a marketing objective in the 1960s. He says that he developed the business plan with a marketing objective in the 1960s. Other critics claim it is not clear if strengthening our drug laws will actually reduce violence and crime. In fact, our business may be hindered in these times of recession. The argument has played its role in and before us the idea that a stronger anti-drug law will not only be a hindrance to the business world but also a hindrance to the economy," said Linda Papp, executive director of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Deadly rock at the food court

By Ted Maglino
Contributor

EXCITING MUSIC STILL HAPPENS in candlelit places. In the Food Village of Sheddsville in King on a hot Wednesday night, the band is the first band to have played the show off its being moved again, even as another performer, a 50-year-old guitar player, killed the show with a string of hits and riffs.

These days, a food court is hardly the place to see a band. But when JDC's (Jays, Smith, Kelly, Kautsky, and Mike) played here, the scene was the same as at a regular rock show, with the promise of a good time. The band, Food Village, had been along since the 1970s, and had been associated with the 40-year-old band.

On this night, JDC seemed to be on a roll. The band had a few hits, and it was a good time to see them.
